

‘I wonder why’

My wife came home one afternoon and she asked me if I had done what we had agreed I would do while she was out.

It was a DIY job that had been on the ‘to do’ list for a long time.

I said that yes, I had completed the task. I showed her what I had done and she said ‘that is not what we agreed you would do.’ ‘It is’, I replied. ‘It is not!’ she said.

That evening there was still an atmosphere in the house. Neither of us got to the bottom of why we had mis-understood each other so fundamentally. At least, I didn’t get the bottom of it. I suspect my wife thinks she did get to the bottom of it and that it was something to do with me and my hearing.

*Have you ever tried to do your best and it all goes wrong?
You think you’ve got it sussed and someone comes along ...
They say something like “that’s not what we agreed.”
And they look at you like you’ve just come off the street.*

*Have you ever felt like you’re the only one in the world?
There’s people all around, you’re working hard but you feel all alone.
No matter what they say you think you have to do it all by yourself.
You find yourself asking ‘is it me or everyone else?’.*

I wonder why.

Some people have the money to roll through the years, others in the world see the day through tears.

There’s people living one day at a time, their hearts are in motion, their hearts are on fire.

*If I had a wish and my wish could come true,
I’d wish every day to be good, and filled with you.*
